Thomas C. Tabor has, over the past thirty-plus years, put ink to paper passing on his expertise in a wide range of shooting-related themes. He is the contributing editor for the Varmint Hunters Association and Gun Digest and he writes the monthly column "Today's Hunter" for Gun World Magazine. He spends his time living and working out of his and his wife's forty-six-acre mountainous hideaway in western Montana, which provides a perfect environment for his love of shooting and hunting.

I purchased this book because I have several in the shooters bible series and really enjoy them. I was a bit disappointed with this book. I was expecting it to cover the more common cartridges used by everyday hunters but the author focused more on large calibers that you would use on large African game as opposed to typical lower 48 game. I think the title of the book was misleading based on the actual content. But if you are interested in the big bores than this would be a good book for you.

It's got everything in this book you need to know about rifle Care and useful tips. Also unlike most books it's written in everyday language Outstanding read, author has a great grasp of the materials. I thoroughly enjoyed reading the many chapters in this book.
