

The book was found

Finding The Lost Cities

Synopsis

Assisted by fourteen specially commissioned maps and full-color photographs of sites and artifacts, the reader is invited on a voyage of exploration through twelve ancient cities, once home to the world's ancient peoples. UP. "

Book Information

Age Range: 12 and up

Hardcover: 192 pages

Publisher: Oxford University Press; Reissue edition (June 12, 1997)

Language: English

ISBN-10: 019509249X

ISBN-13: 978-0195092493

Product Dimensions: 8.8 x 0.8 x 11.2 inches

Shipping Weight: 2.4 pounds

Average Customer Review: 5.0 out of 5 stars 1 customer review

Best Sellers Rank: #3,546,801 in Books (See Top 100 in Books) #32 in Books > Teens > Education & Reference > Social Science > Archaeology #109 in Books > Teens > Education & Reference > History > Exploration & Discovery #241 in Books > Teens > Education & Reference > History > Ancient

Customer Reviews

Grade 7 Up. A description of Howard Carter's 1922 discovery of Tut's tomb immediately engages readers in this engrossing survey of archaeological discoveries. The romance of "lost cities" is fully present in the discussion of 12 sites, arranged chronologically by date of discovery, from 1812 through the 19th century. Steffoff covers Petra, Nineveh, Hattusha, and Ur in the Middle East; Copan in Central America; Chaco Canyon in North America; Angkor in Asia; Troy, Knossos, and Gournia in Europe and Asia Minor; Zimbabwe in Africa; and Machu Picchu in South America. Each chapter describes the excavation of the site, with biographies of the people who conducted the work, including colorful characters like Heinrich Schliemann and Hiram Bingham, and women archaeologists such as Harriet Boyd. What is known about the civilizations as a result of both excavation and painstaking research is given, as are theories about the abandonment and disappearance of the cities. The final chapter shows how satellite and computer imaging revealed Ubar in 1991 and Urkesh in 1995. The index is a bit inconsistent but the bibliography is extensive, with works as recent as 1996. This stunning, oversized book has 13 maps, 130 illustrations and reproductions (30 in color), and a chronology from before 4000 B.C. to 1995. A title that's certain to spark interest in vanished civilizations and in archaeology, with its mix of dramatic discoveries and careful deductions. Pam Gosner, formerly at Maplewood Memorial Library, NJCopyright 1997 Reed Business Information, Inc.

Gr. 7^12. Steffoff chronicles the discoveries of ancient cities, from the Americas to Africa to the Middle East, that were either lost or unexplored in modern times. In addition to capsulizing the history of these places, she paints a vivid picture of archaeology as it has progressed from little more than looting and grave robbing to the painstaking process it is today. The book journeys to some familiar places--among them, Troy, Crete, and the Anasazi cities in New Mexico--but it also examines some lesser-known civilizations, such as Cambodia's Ankgor and Gournia, the first lost city uncovered by a woman. The chronicle of discovery ends on a high technological note with Steffoff describing how NASA's Space Imaging Radar verified the location of a legendary city buried beneath the sands of Oman. More than 100 photos are included, as are a chronology and an extensive reading list. Randy Meyer --This text refers to an alternate Hardcover edition.

This book of archaeology's greatest hits is aimed at young adults, but it would be hard to imagine readers with a general interest in the science not taking to this large-size book with its plentiful illustrations, photographs and maps. Because while Rebecca Steffoff tells the familiar stories, advances have always been made at these sights, so each of the 13 essays contain a familiar ring of the old shot through with conclusions drawn from the latest research. And the stories themselves never lose their charge. Heinrich Schliemann's inspired use of Homer's Iliad and the Odyssey to locate Troy still has the power to enthrall, even as we deplore the methods he used along the way -- smuggling the gold treasures out of Turkey -- as well as the damage he did in excavating the site. Convinced that Homer's Troy was found at the bottom of the site, he carted away layer after layer of unsifted rubble to get there. As it turned out, Troy was older than even he suspected, and he ended up destroying that layer. The history of archaeology is full of stories like these: Arthur Evans rebuilding the Minoan city of Knossos according to his idea of what they should have looked like (critics call his reconstruction "concrete Crete"); Colorado rancher Richard Wetherill exploring the pueblos once occupied by the Anasazis, carting off thousands of relics to sell to museums; archeologists in general denying that Africans were responsible for building Great Zimbabwe in order to fulfill their notions of white supremacy. But "Finding the Lost Cities" points out that time cannot support a story that is false, and that the truth, eventually, is sifted out.

Download to continue reading...

Imaginary Cities: A Tour of Dream Cities, Nightmare Cities, and Everywhere in Between Gay Dating Success: Finding Real Love and Intimacy In a Straight World (Real Love, Sex, Finding Women, Finding Men Book 1) Cities of the Dead: Finding Lost Civilizations (24/7: Science Behind the Scenes) Finding the Lost Cities Cities of the Dead: Finding Lost Civilizations (24/7: Science Behind the Scenes: Mystery Files) Lost trails, Lost Cities Taking Sustainable Cities Seriously: Economic Development, the Environment, and Quality of Life in American Cities (American and Comparative Environmental Policy) 50 Cities of the U.S.A.: Explore America's cities with 50 fact-filled maps (The 50 States) Ancient Maya Cities of the Eastern Lowlands (Ancient Cities of the New World) *OP Cities of Darkness 2 LA Berlin (The Cities of Darkness Series , Vol 2) Acropolis: Ancient Cities (Ancient Cities (Artmedia)) Visible Cities Budapest (Visible Cities Guidebook series) Visible Cities Vienna (Visible Cities Guidebook series) Rand McNally Streets of Quad Cities Illinois/ Iowa (Rand McNally Folded Map: Cities) Finding Ourselves in Venice, Florence, Rome, & Barcelona: Aging adventurers discover the power of place while exploring fascinating cities at their own relaxing pace. Finding Trust (Finding Series, Book 2) Finding Dory Little Golden Book (Disney/Pixar Finding Dory) Finding One: Finding one's self amidst societal norms, digital life, and pursuing goals Finding David ("Finding David" Series Book 1) Hygge: The Danish Art of Living Happy, Finding the Joy in Simple Things and Escaping the Stresses of Modern Life (Hygge, Happiness, Finding Joy, Escaping Stress)

Contact Us

DMCA

Privacy

FAQ & Help