Kindergarten-Grade 2 "Illustrated with full-page, full-color photographs, this highly readable title explains basic facts of shark life and elaborates on the diversity of different species. Clear comparisons are made with real-life objects; readers learn that some sharks are so small that they can be held in the palm of the hand while others are longer than a pickup truck. Concepts and new vocabulary are explained in context with a pronunciation guide for harder words in parentheses. Common misconceptions are also considered: humans are more likely to be hit by lightning than killed by a shark. A discussion of the need to protect the animals' habitat includes the fact that people have killed more than half of all the sharks in the world." K-Gr. 2. With dramatic photographs provided by the Wildlife Conservation Society, this I Can Read book includes more than the usual deliciously shivery shark-attack stories. There are also some fascinating facts about how sharks use their senses and how they find their prey. The short sentences are clear and informative, and photos, including a few close-ups, contrast the blue-green of the ocean habitat with the brown of the polluted shallow waters where people dump oil and trash. Kids will want to talk about the role of predators in nature and the need to stop hunting sharks and polluting their nurseries; the picture of a shark caught in a net helps reinforce the conservation message.
