From Kirkus Reviews: "Budding weatherfrog Freddy makes his television debut as a hurricane roars over Lilypad. Garish red and yellow images appearing on the radar screens at the Frog News Network signal that it's time for Lilypad's residents to board up windows, get the lawn furniture inside, and head for the safety of the town Frogatorium. Except, that is, for Freddy, who joins his weathercasting colleagues, Sally Croaker and Polly Woggins, to track Tropical Storm Andrea as it strengthens to a hurricane and heads for landfall. Though the radar image looks ominous and Polly submits an outdoor report clinging to a signpost as the wind blows her off her webbed feet, Cox's cartoon images of a popeyed, froggy cast in human dress calmly preparing for the storm underplay the danger in favor of a focus on being ready and staying informed. Freddy's first on-screen Frog

News Alert goes over without a hitch, and when the hurricane passes (leaving but minor damage, aside from an overturned car), he predicts 'toad-ally awesome' weather for a trip to the beach. Dean caps the episode with simply written comments about how hurricanes form and are categorized, historical tidbits, the difference between a 'watch' and a 'warning,' and more detail on preparing for a storm. Common-sense attitude and advice, sunnily conveyed."

I'm 'blown' away with how much info Janice managed to sneak into a fun story that'll educate our tadpoles and frogs alike!"#151;Indra Petersons, National Weather Anchor, Certified Broadcast Meteorologist, and Alliance for Women in Media STEM Leadership in Media award honoree"Through the passion and courage of an aspiring meteorologist, Janice Dean takes us to the eye of a hurricane and back. It is no leap of judgment to predict that this story will hatch new weather enthusiasts eager to jump into the wonderful world of meteorology."#151;Dr. Greg Postel, Hurricane and Storm Specialist, The Weather Channel

Love Janice Dean - book is excellent

Anything Janice does is AWESOME

The book is colorful and informative. I bought it for a Kindergarten class and I think it is a little too advanced. However, since we experience Hurricanes here in SE Texas, the children will probably understand it.

My grandchildren love this.

Great grandchildren gift

Just what we wanted!

This is another book to finalize my collection. Living in a land lock area, it is hard for my students to imagine the affects of a hurricane on people. This gives a good overall view and how we can help others in need during a disaster. .

I have been waiting for this book. I enjoy Janice Dean on FOX. I was happy to read the book to my grandsons.
