Shoshana Silberman is a published author and an editor of children's books. Some of the published credits of Shoshana Silberman include A Family Haggadah II.

Based on the descriptions, I was hoping this haggadah would still have the traditional haggadah components in addition to the family focused sections. This is not a traditional haggadah, but does meet the needs of families that have children with short attention spans. I was not unhappy with the book, but hoped for a little more when ordering.

We have lots of young children and antsy adults at our seder table, so this haggadah was perfect! It has all the stuff you want - ha lachma anya, vehi sheamda, dayenu, hallel in HEBREW, not English like in so many children's haggadot, but the story of Passover is condensed and understandable.

We got through the first part of the seder in an hour, and the kids were engaged and active. I am buying six more and this will be my official haggadah until the kids are grown (and maybe even then, too!).

This was a wonderful Christian Seder Door Prize. It reinforced what I was trying to teach.

I have used this haggadah for years. It is excellent.

Excellent

We used this Haggadah at a Seder where people ranged from age 2-68, everyone (including those with a more traditional seder typically) felt that this Haggadah covered everything it ought to and made for a well balanced Seder, plenty to read and learn but also plenty to sing and enjoy!

Fine book - written for children, but as with other fine children's' books, can be useful for adults also. Layout, text and illustrations are delightful.

Great for a big Passover with a lot of English speakers. Has every thing in both Hebrew and English and follows the usual format
